Attendees Enjoy Rural Activism Conference
by Paul Brierley (XVI) and Julie Murphree (VII)

Project CENTRL, in conjunction with Arizona Farm Bureau’s Young Farmers & Ranchers and United Dairymen of Arizona’s Young Cooperators, recently hosted a one-day educational/motivational conference in Casa Grande. The conference theme, Activism in Arizona, focused on proactive strategies to advance and protect the economic benefits of rural agriculture and natural resource industries in Arizona.

The biennial “Joint Conference” by the three groups is offered to extend the learning opportunities for CENTRL alumni and other rural leaders. “This conference was a great success in that it brought rural leaders from throughout the state together to expand their knowledge and motivate them to take action in support of rural Arizona,” said Joe King, chair of the conference committee.

PRESIDENT’S REMARKS

Graduation
I am especially looking forward to the Project CENTRL Class XVIII Graduation and Alumni Awards Banquet on October 19, 2007 at the Grace Inn in Ahwatukee. This affair will focus on the graduating class, new class introductions, outstanding alumni awards, and Project CENTRL. You can expect an excellent dinner, program and a chance to network with old friends. We know Alumni will want to demonstrate their support for Project CENTRL by attending and participating in the event. Mark your calendars and plan to attend with as many friends and family members as you wish. This is certainly an opportunity for prospective applicants to attend and learn more about Project CENTRL.

In attending several of these graduation dinners in the past, I have found them to be exciting and filled with laughter while at the same time providing evidence of the noble purpose and benefits of our leadership program. It is always good to see friends and enjoy a pleasant evening together. More importantly, to see the continued progress of Project CENTRL administered by an outstanding Staff and Board of Directors with the support of over 450 Alumni.

Outstanding Alumni Awards
The Outstanding Alumni Awards provide an opportunity to recognize those individuals who are doing significant work in their community, organization or state. We will notify the winners of the Outstanding Alumni Award’s prior to the October graduation event so friends, family and classmates can participate.

This is your opportunity to nominate fellow Alumni who you feel deserves recognition. The award categories are in the areas of Agriculture, Community Service, Public Policy, and Natural Resources.

The latest CRC was held January 26th in Lake Havasu City home to the world-famous London Bridge and some of the most spectacular scenery in the southwest. Lake Havasu is both a water lover’s paradise and a desert lover’s dream. Visitors enjoy the top-rated RV resorts and condominiums with spectacular views and convenient locations. Jarrod Lyman, Vice President of the Lake Havasu City Convention and Visitors Bureau spoke to us and he shares his comments in an article for us.

I recently had the pleasure of speaking to Project Centrl Alumni about the importance of tourism in our state’s economy. I was lucky to have such a receptive audience of people with intimate knowledge of how our economy works. They know how one sector thriving breeds success with other sectors of the economy. That is why tourism is so vital. The number one industry throughout the entire world is tourism. The United States depends heavily on tourism. In 2005, the US took in $654 billion in tourism dollars. That money paid 7.5 million people $171 billion. And of course, the various governments got their share of the money, as $105 billion went to Federal, State, County and local governments.

Tourism is Arizona’s top performing industry as well. In 2005, our great state hosted 31 million domestic and international visitors. That translated to $17.5 billion to our state economy.

While Maricopa County gets a lot of that money, the rural portions of Arizona see a lot from tourism. Many visitors coming to Arizona are looking for the “Arizona experience” that only the rural areas can provide, and that is reflected in the amount of money that comes into the counties through tourism.

Mohave County took in a healthy $434 million from tourism in 2005. While that may not sound like a lot, especially when compared to some of the national numbers, keep in mind that Mohave County has less than 200,000 residents. La Paz County saw a lot of money from tourism as well. $205 million went into the coffers in that county. Yuma County saw $566 million as a result of the travel industry.

Needless to say, tourism plays a vital role in the economy of our state, our counties and our cities. And while we’ve all heard people gripe about tourist season, or even perhaps thought that tourism didn’t benefit them, we all need to remember how our economy works. If one cog in the machine malfunctions, that will affect the next gear and so forth, until our entire economic engine suffers. We saw it here in Lake Havasu City in the mid-nineties. Due to erroneous media reports that the lake was closed and tourism took a drastic hit. So did everything else. No one was buying cars or building homes. A lot of people lost their jobs, and it took four to eight years, depending on where you look to and whom you talk, for the economy to recover to the levels it was at before, all because tourism faltered.

Just because you may not see a dollar from tourism, doesn’t mean it doesn’t affect you. When they lose out on that dollar, so do you. And so does someone you patronize. Tourism is a vital part of our economy, especially in the rural counties of Arizona. Just look around at the beautiful scenery we enjoy on a daily basis, and you will see why so many other people want to be here, if only to visit. That’s a good thing.

Alumni in Action

by Pennee Murphree

I attended the Activism in Arizona, Creating your Vision Collaborative Conference hosted by Farm Bureau Young Farmers and Ranchers, Project Centrl Alumni, and The United Dairymen of Arizona Young Cooperators on March 9th and I was happy I did. It was well worth the investment and very informative. The guest speaker, Bruce Vincent gave an inspiring and helpful presentation as well as seven Project Centrl Alumni. Here was a great example of Alumni in Action. Topics such as “Smart Consumerism”, presented by Eric Swanson, “Legislative Toolkit”, presented by Robert Shuler, “Walking the Web”, presented by Julie Murphree, “The Smell of Success by Casey Stechnij” and “Did Any Good Come from Hogwash?” presented by Bas Aja were eye opening and challenging. Kelly Anderson and Karl Peterson led an excellent discussion group on “Facing the Challenges of Rapid Growth.” Just as important were those alumni I saw in attendance giving support to this collaborative effort to inform and give encouragement to those who face many of issues addressed at the conference. It is indeed imperative that we become active in our support of rural Arizona.

Tracy Candelaria (Class XVI)

Tracy Candelaria is a graduate of Project Centrl Class XVI. Tracy was born in Michigan and began residing in Arizona in 1971. An Alhambra High School graduate, she obtained her AA degree from Mohave Community College in Criminal Justice. Tracy has been a police dispatcher for Mohave County Sheriff’s office, a Mohave County corrections officer and, following her graduation from Arizona Law Enforcement Training Academy in Tucson, Arizona became a Police officer for the city of Kingman, Arizona.

After she married Criss Candelaria they moved to Concho, Arizona where she became a stay-at-home mom. She became active in the community and has 3 times won election to the Concho School Districts’ governing board. She was appointed to the Arizona School Board Association’s Legislative Committee by the ASBA President.

She is currently a Concho Valley Lions Club member and serves on the Non Profit Resource Center of Northern Arizona technology board, seeking to bring the latest technology and computer aided training to rural Arizona communities and non-profit organizations. She also is a member of Concho CAN, a non-profit corporation that operates the many functions of the Concho Activity Center.

Presiding Superior Court Judge, Donna Grimsley, has appointed her twice to both the Apache County Foster Care Review Board and the State Foster Care Review Board.

Tracy has been a 4H Horsemanship Leader. She enjoys horseback riding, technology, hiking and attending her children’s sporting events. In November of 2006, she was elected as the Constable in St Johns, Arizona

Cheryl Sawyer (Class XIV)

I am a consultant and director with Southern Living at Home where I am able to stay home with my 3 children, Hadley 6, Avery 4, and Lute 8 months while building a team, and selling beautiful home décor items. I have been working the business for almost 4 years won 3 free trips and took the last 8 months off to have my son and finish our new home. That is what is great about this business, I can work as much or as little as I want. Our mission as a company is “to create a feeling of welcome, comfort, and beauty in homes all across America, while fostering the Spirit of Generosity in the lives of our consultants and their families. Ready to start a new business or update your home, visit my website www.southernlivingathome.com/cherylsawyer.

Mary Kaffer (Class XI)

As to me personally, since my completion of participation in Project CENTRL, I have served on the City of Yuma Planning & Zoning Commission, the U.S. International Boundary and Water Commission Citizens Forum, and last year was appointed to the Governor’s Council on Workforce Policy. I hold Project CENTRL totally responsible for my community involvement.
More than 100 attendees from around Arizona gathered to hear Bruce Vincent, a logger from Montana, inspire attendees to get in the game. An advocate of the Wise Use movement, Vincent regularly appears on the McNeil/Lehrer Hour and has been on 60 Minutes. His presentation motivated participants to become proactive on the rural issues most important to them. He spoke on three basic truths: (1) Democracy works, but it’s not a spectator sport, (2) When people lead, leaders will follow, and (3) The world is run by those who show up.

Vincent said that our society is ready for “a vision of hope” brought forth by a new “non-shrill” voice. He implored the crowd to paint a picture for the public of the USA 100 years from now with rural industries in it. Otherwise, he warned, we’ll be painted out of that future vision by those who don’t understand the importance of rural America. He told those in the audience that one hour per week dedicated to rural activism “should be part of your overall business plan.”

Besides showing up to key meetings, Vincent talked about regularly writing letters to the editor, especially for your local paper. “No one is going to write them for you,” he says, “and so much of what you must do to defend your industry starts by driving the process locally.”

Those that attended learned from six “rapid-fire” presentations on tools and success stories, and were able to participate in concurrent breakout sessions covering topics such as “facing Challenges of Rapid Growth,” “Working with the Opposition,” and “Animal Rights After Prop 204.”

The day ended with a social get-together to rekindle old relationships and make new connections. Said one participant, “The pace of the day-long event was perfect and there was so much to learn!”

DIRECTOR’S UPDATE ON CLASS XVIII SEMINAR HIGHLIGHTS

A GROWING LEGACY OF ALUMNI LEADERSHIP
by Everett Rhodes

It is most gratifying to have Alumni return to seminars and share their leadership skills with current class members. Their demonstration of outstanding public service bring added value to the experiences gained by others and are yet another example of our growing legacy of leadership. Following are brief highlights of alumni who performed key roles in the success of recent seminars:

A warm welcome to Yuma by County Supervisor, Russ McCloud (XVI), started the Global Dynamics Seminar in Yuma on January 18th. Friday’s extensive study tour was guided by Sonny Rodriguez (XII), President of The Grower's Company, Jose Solorzano (XVI), Manager, American Takii, Inc., Hank Auza (XVII), Farmer and Manager at Barkley Company and Jerry Paulin XVII), Owner, The Filter Company. This foursome orchestrated an excellent Ag and Border/Immigration study tour followed by a superb Class XVIII/Alumni mixer/dinner at Yuma Crossing State Park along the Colorado River.

We are most fortunate to have the capable leadership and service of Alumni during CENTRL’s Arizona Legislative Day on February 22nd. This action-packed day started with an early morning breakfast that featured Cheryl Goar (IX), Executive Director of the Arizona Nursery Association and Bas Aja (VII), lobbyist for the Arizona Cattlemen’s Association. Robert Shuler, an alumni from California’s Ag leadership program and attorney for Ryley Carlock & Applewhite also contributed to this highly interactive morning work session. CENTRL Board members Cheryl Goar, Bas Aja, and Jim Klinker, Executive Secretary of the Arizona Farm Bureau, all made key contacts and helped guide another productive day at the Capitol.

Many alumni served as hosts, facilitators, moderators, judges, and presenters to help make the “Polishing Leadership Skills” seminar in Prescott a huge success! Jim Grundy (XV), Yavapai County Fair Manager, gave a warm welcome and hosted an elegant dinner and class/alumni mixer in Prescott Valley. CENTRL Board Member and President of HWC Consulting, Heather Walker (II), facilitated a series of three rewarding sessions on reflecting, reporting, and evaluating the legacy of the CENTRL experience. Before coordinating two rounds of a highly interactive discussion meet, Paul Brierley (XVI), Director of Organization at the Arizona Farm Bureau, also conducted an informative session on running for public office. Paul’s message was given added meaning by the Chairman of the Yavapai County Board of Supervisors, Chip Davis (XIII). Moderators for the discussion meet were Marnie Uhl (XVII), Walter Burcham (XVI), Tom Haley (III), and Marcos Moore (XVII) and judges for this special event were James Perey (XVII), Diane Joens (XVI), Jimmy Wojcik (XV), and Mike Olsen (I). It was the combined efforts of many CENTRL Alumni that gave an extra luster of polish to the leadership skills gained by the current class.

As always, the true values of Project CENTRL are found among its graduates and the enduring rewards they give to rural Arizona. Clearly, the legacy of rural leadership in Arizona is on the grow!
