4-H Members Change the Future of 4-H

4-H members recently returned home from a week in Washington, D.C. at which more than 350 youth and adults gathered to share ideas and form recommendations to guide the future of national 4-H youth development programs nationally and in their communities.

Reflecting today’s environmentally conscious society, the theme of this year’s National 4-H Conference was, “Green Aid: Acquire, Inform, Deliver.” As society becomes more environmentally conscious, how can the 4-H Youth Development Program aid in enhancing socially significant and relevant programming to increase the environmental awareness of our clubs, our communities, our country and our world?

Through conference focus groups, citizenship excursions, workshops, roundtable discussions and a dynamic town hall meeting, 4-H members crafted recommendations for the future of 4-H programs. National 4-H Director Cathann Kress presented these recommendations on behalf of the delegates to Agriculture Secretary Ed Schaffer and other 4-H and USDA officials during the USDA Assembly. The recommendations include:

- Strive for a more nationally coherent program, which reflects local needs and priorities. This would include reaching out with relevant programs to youth typically under served by 4-H, such as urban audiences.
- Develop national opportunities to engage older members and keep them involved in 4-H.

- Encourage 4-H to make greater use of communication to engage members with one another and share curricular materials and program ideas.
- At all levels of 4-H, do a better job of telling the story of 4-H through national promotions & publicity.
- Invest and allocate funds to develop new project areas, deliver the latest technologies to youth at the local level and increase state-level funding critical to their program’s health.

So, who were these 4-H members who went to Washington, D.C. and developed recommendations for the future of 4-H?? They were senior 4-H members, just like you! (Or, just like you will become!) Four of the 4-H members were from Arizona! All of the members have been busy with project work and community club work and community service and leadership... just like you! They also felt the commitment and the dedication to the 4-H program to give their voice to 4-H and to the country. The 4-H program is ripe with opportunities... and just like everything else in life, it is up to YOU to make the choice to take advantage of the opportunities that are offered. I urge you to set a goal for yourself and for the 4-H program. You are eligible to attend National 4-H Conference when you are 15 years old by January 1st. For more information go to the Arizona State 4-H website and click on Opportunities. Think about it! This is one opportunity you won’t want to miss. From our 4-H Archiver:

I am looking for pictures from each individual club to place in our future Yavapai County 4-H/FFA scrapbooks. Right now we have a lot of pictures over the years from Expo, Horse Shows, & FFA competitions. I would really like pictures of club activities. It will be helpful if you can include the following on your pictures:

- Club Name, Activity, Full Names of 4-H kids/parents/leaders & the Date
- You can bring them to either Extension Office. Thank You!

Leadership Camp & Service Learning Opportunity Held on May 10, 2008

By Patti Marrs and Katie Radosevic

The morning was devoted to Service Learning which included icebreakers, a service learning project on making baby blankets for a birthing center in Malawi and a "How to" workshop on Service Learning. We all enjoyed a simple lunch (on real plates to prove just how easy it is to wash a dish) and even discussed how fortunate we are to be able to wash our hands in clean running water and how many children die each year simply because they do have this luxury. Katie Radosevic explained that Service Learning could be about anything you are passionate about. Her passion is the Millennium Development Goals set by the United Nations in 2000 explaining that is why she choose this project for this day.

After lunch Katie lead a series of workshops including team building, trust and leadership themes, all things that she had learned at 4-H events over the past two years.
